

Alexander D. Tuttle, Esq.

Associate

Mr. Tuttle graduated from the George Washington University Law School and earned his B.A. in Psychology from Emory University. Prior to joining LePatner, Mr. Tuttle practiced residential and commercial real estate and construction litigation as a senior associate at an established construction law firm in Manhattan. Mr. Tuttle currently specializes in commercial and high-end residential real estate and construction transactions and litigation, and corporate advisory and compliance services, including feasibility analysis, negotiations, contracts, claims resolution, and on-going business counsel.

Mr. Tuttle is currently seeking his Masters in Real Estate at New York University, with a focus in real estate finance. Mr. Tuttle integrates legal and business counsel for developer and design professional clients through analysis of financial models and lender and equity financing, negotiating and executing key business decisions and settlements, implementing corporate ownership transition, and preserving financial interests and risk management.

Mr. Tuttle is licensed to practice law in New York and Connecticut. Mr. Tuttle is a member of the New York State Bar Association, Urban Land Institute, and Young Real Estate Professionals of New York.
